Pursuing your dream begins here.

Who inspired you?

"Many members of my family work in healthcare, but witnessing my father's passion for helping others through his career was my main motivation. He worked in cardiology his whole life and to this day, I have yet to meet a person who is so passionate in what they do. In nursing you truly learn to help others, many times putting the patient's needs above your own. Having worked as a critical care nurse, you deal with critically-ill patients with multiple, life-threatening diseases at one time. You learn to live thinking on your toes and anticipating the next thing so you can always be a step ahead."
